An overview of Crescent.

Daracombe Park is conveniently located on the western fringe of Newton Abbot within the highly sought after village of Highweek.

Once the home of Sir Charles Seale-Hayne, Daracombe House itself is a superb residence previously situated in its own walled grounds. It is said that Sir Charles Seale-Hayne's wife would run a flag up the flagpole to call him home when his tea was ready. Daracombe House is set in Daracombe Park, three acres of serene private grounds.

With the entrance via electronic gates, intercom linked to the properties, Daracombe Park benefits from privacy and excellent security. When you are at home, you would hardly know you are on the edge of a thriving village.

Step inside and prepare to be surprised. The impact is instant...

Situated between Daracombe House and The Walled Garden, Crescent is formed around a stunning Copper Beech tree where the architecture is softened by natural surroundings. The tree forms an impressive focal point for the properties, with the new access road sweeping around to serve each driveway.

The four 4 and 5 bedroom homes are exceptionally designed over three floors and will each benefit from an extremely generous living space abundant in light.

These individual homes consist an integral garage, rear garden area and a substantial roof terrace with spectacular far reaching views towards Haytor and Dartmoor.

FUSING THE HOME AND GARDEN TOGETHER

Whichever direction you take, Crescent is an excellent base for getting out and around in Devon and the South West.

Highweek Village is situated north west of Newton Abbot town centre and is serviced by nearby amenities including a local shop, a popular inn and a picturesque church.

Highweek still retains the atmosphere of a village, yet the centre of the market town is approximately one mile away. Newton Abbot has a thriving town centre with a range of both local and national shops, a weekly market, sports centre, cinema and a mainline station which connects to Paddington.

The A380 provides access to both the English Riviera, and the M5 motorway near the Cathedral City of Exeter, which also has its own International airport. Exeter is just half an hour away by car and offers excellent shopping, and award winning restaurants. Heading south, the city of Plymouth offers a rich maritime history and all the benefits one would expect of a major city.

Highweek makes an ideal place for pursuing leisure interests along the glorious South Devon coastline, the surrounding countryside

(with its rivers, golf courses etc) and nearby Dartmoor National Park. For walkers this area is second to none. With wonderful beaches, breathtaking coastal walks, rugged moorland, rolling hills and thatched cottages, the area is undeniably one of the most beautiful areas in the country.

The traditional seaside resorts of Teignmouth and Shaldon are a short distance away and offer fine beaches and sailing. Slightly further afield are the stunning South Hams, an area of outstanding natural beauty and fascinating harbour towns and villages such as Dartmouth and Salcombe.
